Subject: Viewpoint on Microsoft AntiTrust Case

I think the negotiated settlement is fair and the litigation should not be dragged on to benefit a few influential competitors. This antitrust case has taught Microsoft a lesson and Microsoft's conduct will be different. It's in public interest to not waste tax dollars on cases that do not benefit the public. A case in point - the class action suit against Microsoft took a wrong turn and denied underprivileged children from getting billion dollars worth of free computers and only to benefit a few powerful lawyers.
